

ELIMINATE CAUSE,
REMEDY FOR STRIKESAdministration Plan Does Not
Contemplate Conscripting of Labor for Private Gain.

Washington, July 28.—Reactionary theories for legislation forbidding strikes and fixing maximum wages of labor when Congress reconvenes began to show results both at the capitol and in administration circles today.

Arbitrary power over practically all labor will be given the administration when Congress broadens the draft ages. The labor group in Congress, fearing that the power may be used to effect a "conscript" of labor through extension of the "work or fight" order, conferred and discussed the advisability of exacting a pledge from the administration that it will embark on no such course without first consulting the house and the senate. Such a movement would have the approval of a majority of both houses, it was believed, although there would be some violent dissenters.

Speaking for the administration, however, Secretary of Labor Wilson emphatically declared there could be nothing in the nature of conscription of labor for private enterprise. Before conscripting labor the government must, he said, be satisfied that it would be benefited, the secretary said. Secretary Wilson is believed accurately to reflect the views of President Wilson. The president's aim is to have the problem of labor attacked from the wrong end. Remove the cause and the cessation of strikes will be automatic, the president believes, according to those who have discussed the situation with him. Eliminating strikes without remedying the cause would be folly.

The present attempts to seize upon minor labor troubles as an excuse for drastic action against labor is deplored by those close to the president. The employing of Prussian methods would so alienate a large group of the American people that the present unity—which was not easily achieved—would be seriously endangered, they said. Also it would alienate the laboring classes of all the allied countries, which are rapidly approaching a dominating position. The damage that would be done to the allied cause in the eyes of the liberals of Germany and Austria is held to be incalculable.

By rejecting the solution proposed by anti-laborites, the administration is not closing its eyes to the existence of a definite and serious problem. It is a complex problem, not easy of solution. In the national war labor board, administration officials believe, a piece of machinery destined to serve important ends has been created; but other machinery to deal with other aspects of the problem must still be constructed.

Advisers of President Wilson who are sympathetic with labor are understood to feel that the adoption of Provoost Marshall's General Crowder's "work or fight" order without modification was not altogether wise. They regarded the specific mention of "salesmen and clerks" in the order as a regrettable mistake. These workers are without strong labor organizations to represent them in the government councils and some are complaining that the administration did not fear to discriminate against them for that very reason.

The proposal that "all men within the new draft ages be placed under military control so that the military authorities may cope with any strike or other difficulty" has been received with serious alarm. It is regarded by liberal administration officials as related to the familiar tactics in industrial disputes whereby the militia is called in, after framed up riots, to assist in breaking strikes and to quell the breach between employer and employee that was not believed to be so wide.

TROUBLE GONE NOW

Declares Lung-Vita Saved His Life—Recommends It.

"I spent hundreds of dollars for doctors and medicine and got no relief until I used Lung-Vita. It cured me of a trouble that I am sure would have carried me to my grave," said Mr. J. Hicks, who lives on Buchanan street, Nashville, Tenn., just a day or so ago. Mr. Hicks is with the Nashville Street railway.

"I had suffered for years with a trouble that the doctor said was bronchitis. I coughed almost continuously and my chest got very sore. I just about got to the place where I would have had to quit my work. I took Lung-Vita as a last resort, but will say it is the finest medicine in the world. I am entirely cured, have no pains in my chest, eat heartily and sleep well. My strength is fast returning and so is my appetite."

"To anyone who wishes relief from bronchial trouble I can conscientiously recommend Lung-Vita as the best medicine in the country."

Should your druggist or dealer not have Lung-Vita, write Nashville Medicine Co., Nashville, Tenn. (Advt.)
